Report of the Board President
Tim Wessel

I have had the pleasure and privilege of serving as the President of the BCTV board for only one year, but I see this past year as the frosting on the cake of my almost 12 years of active board membership here at BCTV.

In all of those years, I have witnessed days of tumult as well as days of triumph, and I can truly say that the current state of Brattleboro Community Television is strong. I have witnessed a great change and hopefully done my part in guiding this organization from one that was struggling to merely exist amidst an atmosphere of rancor and petty squabbling, to one that has proven to be a vital part of our southern Vermont community, aided by a dedicated staff and involved board members and volunteers.

Thank you to all who I have been blessed to have worked with over the years. I intend to stay involved with BCTV going forward, and I hope all of you will join me in dedicating at least some portion of our lives to continuing to strengthen and shape our community television station here in beautiful Brattleboro, Vermont.

Sincerely,

Tim Wessel

Message from the Executive Director
Cor Trowbridge

Last year BCTV celebrated completing the final stage in renovating our studio space. This was a big step forward in what BCTV could offer producers as an easy to use and technologically up-to-date facility. The studio now can be operated by a single person, switching cameras using an iPad app while being on camera, as well as by an entire crew using the hundreds of options available on our HD switcher. For the first time, we have volunteer producers operating the studio independently, on shows such as Living and Dying, Energy Week with George Harvey, and Let’s Talk about Mental Health and Addiction.

We turned our attention to the next project, which was the overhaul of BCTV’s website, brattleboroTV.org. In 2009, BCTV was part of the first wave of public access stations to stream our channels live and offer on-demand video. We considered it a priority due to the high percentage of local residents without access to cable television and therefore local programs. But four years later, we had created thousands of videos that were increasingly hard to find in our simple, one-portal player. What we wanted from the new website was 1) a searchable video library, 2) a way for producers to submit programming online, and 3) a mobile-friendly site. We found an open source template created for a larger station, modified it to meet our needs, imported our videos, and the site went live in May 2014.

On the horizon is the renewal of our six-year contract with Comcast, which expires in March 2016. Before entering negotiations, BCTV must make an assessment of community needs related to local television. The board will form a Contract Committee and reach out to all types of users and potential users to learn what people want from BCTV over the next 6-10 years. Please contact me at cor@brattleborotv.org if you want to be a part of this critical effort that will shape the future of the organization.

– Cor Trowbridge

Below: Cor explains to producers how they can use the new website to organize and distribute videos.
Financial Statement

This year’s financials reflect increased production services income while maintaining payroll for four full-time and several part-time employees. Professional fees included completion of the website project along with our annual required audit. High-speed, symmetrical bandwidth and more robust web hosting and maintenance requirements increased our technological infrastructure costs.

Video Production Training - BCTV offers a training series in the Fall and Spring. This year we offered individual editing training, but did not offer group training on Final Cut Pro because we are moving away from this software.

- Flash certification: An hour-long individual orientation to camera controls or digital editing software puts gear in producers’ hands.
- Camera Fundamentals: How to operate a video camera, basic composition and lighting techniques, the importance of good audio.
- Studio Production: Introduces technical skills and concepts for using BCTV’s studio and control room.
- Video for Any Device: How to create and edit video using your cell phone or tablet.

Left: Production Manager Roland Boyden gives hands-on camera training to volunteers from the Windham World Affairs Council, so they can record their lecture series.

Youth Video Camp

During this year's week-long "Young Broadcasters" Video Camp, 14 campers aged 9-13 brainstormed and created their own commercials, PSAs, interviews and parodies, while learning camera skills, video editing, working with sound and video effects, and green screening. They premiered their video, “Return to the Rise of Planet of the Clams,” before a packed house of parents and fans.

Equipment Use

The Canon XA10 continues to be a popular camera with producers and is more in-demand than the larger, heavier Sony ZSU. Field Producer* Rich Melanson uses a dedicated XA10 kit for municipal meetings.

Programming

Locally-created programs make up well over the majority of what you see on BCTV. There were changes to weekly series that affected the totals for this year. Hours of Vermont Media Exchange programming increased as this service expanded throughout the state. Overall programming declined slightly.
